

e-Journals

World Scientific and Imperial College Press are proud to welcome you to our rapidly expanding journal programme which has grown to include more than 120 international peer reviewed journals and has kept pace with the latest developments in scientific research, providing prompt responses to the demand for publication outlets and readership in rapidly advancing fields like nanoscience and the quantum computing.

Worldscientific.com, our e-platform, provides an array of services which includes free table of contents, email alerts on new issues of our journals, the latest news related to our journals, online sample articles, forthcoming papers, search functions, journal promotions and related links. Indexing and abstracting information, as well as hosting gateways are also available from the web site. The Journal homepages will also display the contents of the most current issue, so that users can look for updates with less clicks. The search engine has been further optimized so as to increase the speed which results are returned.

World Scientific Archives was launched in 2005 to make older content (prior to 2001) electronically accessible in subject collections. The portal contains abstracts and full-text journal articles dating back to 1973. To date, more than 30,000 articles from over 60 journals are available on this platform.
